

Eric Andrew

Eric Andrew is working to drive sustainable, equitable economic growth and climate action among young people and marginalized populations in northern Nigeria. He is the founder and Team Lead of AgrofixiNG, a nonprofit in Nigeria, successfully implementing solutions in agriculture and the circular economy. Through AgrofixiNG, Eric supports young people, women, girls, and smallholder farmers, providing entrepreneurship and skill development opportunities, climate-smart technologies, waste-to-resource production systems in agriculture, and increased market access.

Eric has contributed to the success of projects, research studies, and policy advocacy including those supported by Mastercard Foundation, USAID, Sasakawa Africa Association, Cloneshouse, Bridge Connect Africa Initiative, and Gatesfield. He is interested in pursuing a career in international trade and development economics, to shape policies and strategies for developing countries to foster economic growth and thrive in the face of a changing climate.
