Session Title

Integrating Net Zero and Nature Positive for Investment

Session Description

As the world transitions toward a net zero economy, the opportunity to integrate nature protection and restoration has never been greater. Climate change and biodiversity loss are deeply interconnected. The World Bank estimates that nature investment needs to scale up to USD700 billion annually from its current base of USD120-140 billion per year. This panel will explore how investment strategies can align decarbonisation and nature conservation efforts to benefit both climate and natural ecosystems.
